

GLEN BOLEN, AICP

Vice President

As Vice President at Fregonese Associates, Bolen provides leadership within the company and is one of the firm's core strategic decision makers. He provides guidance and supervision to the firm's team of project managers and their staff. With fifteen years experience at the cutting edge of planning, he excels in project management and strategy, public involvement, ordinance writing, and scenario planning for scales both large and small. Bolen has utilized his project management and technical skills for a number of Fregonese Associates clients, including those in Los Angeles, California; Dallas, Texas; Austin, Texas; Contra Costa County, California, Marion County, Oregon; Denton, Texas; Vancouver, Washington; Nashville, Tennessee; and most recently Louisiana Speaks, a long-term recovery plan for Southern Louisiana.

Bolen is one of Fregonese Associates' key managers with a proven record of success, from downtown plans to regional growth strategies. Recently Bolen managed the creation of Dallas, Texas' first ever comprehensive plan. He also managed a growth visioning process for the Southern California Association of Governments, a project that marks a great leap forward for coordinated planning in this very important region. In another past project, Bolen has constructed a comprehensive regional GIS database for the five counties of the Central Texas Region, an area that doubles in population every twenty years. The new robust GIS database and modeling capabilities are enabling the analysis of trends, projections of future changes to the landscape, and the ability to create and evaluate alternative land use and transportation scenarios.
